"Thrilled at how astonishingly beautiful Buyat is. Pristine - no rubbish - no human impact - no coral damage. Lots of fish of all sizes, critters everywhere, corals in every color. We've never seen such huge table corals, such fantastic rock formations."

A chance to see reefs as they used to be. As they should be...

Just a swift boat ride to the south of Lembeh Strait lies Buyat Bay, one of the most amazing dive sites to be discovered in the North Sulawesi area in recent times.

Once the exclusive playground of employees at a long since closed gold mine, it has been rigorously protected from harmful and illegal fishing practices for many years.

Well-known dive professional Steve Weaver, dreamweaverdivetravel.com, said of Buyat: "I was amazed. I've never seen such abundant hard corals before."

Erwin Filius, PADI and SSI Instructor, with more than 4,000 logged Indonesian dives, described Buyat thus: "Reefs as beautiful and healthy as any I've seen."

Now you can experience Buyat Bay for yourself with critters@lembeh. 10 dive excursions start at $550. For more information: info@crittersatlembeh.com

Be aware though, that trips to Buyat are exploratory in nature and require an adventurous and flexible spirit, and the willingness to take things as they happen.

Accommodation is basic, but it's clean and comfortable. Food - local fare - is plentiful and very tasty.
